We are each fillinging in the book as a gift for each other for next Christmas. We thought it would be fun to get each others own personal take on our story than to fill out one book together. We have been married 40 years and so are very thankful for the prompts, or suggestions to help us scratch up the memories that have been somewhat fogged over with 40 years of all the other stuff that happens in life. But this would make a great wedding gift to because the couple (or get one for each spouse) can fill it in as they go along, then they would not have to recall, each emotion would be right there as they added to their story. Here are some of the prompts from the book, there are over 150 questions that are well thought out and help record your romance. Section One: Getting to know You, Tying the knot, Starting out together. "Before I met you my love life was...." "On our first date we...." "These things symbolized our growing love (special song, place, poem, etc..." "These are some of the reactions we got when announcing our engagement (and wedding date...)" Our _____ anniversary was particularly memorable because...." The first section continues on with questions to answer about settling into your marriage, dealing with differences in personalities and ideals, learning to support each other, special traditions you established for holidays. The real getting comfy with each other stuff that all marriages grow through.
